Welcome to LEM Phonics

Since 1997 LEM Phonics has enjoyed excellent success as a superior method of teaching literacy to early primary children.

Through phonograms, sounds and the rules that govern the relationships between them, LEM Phonics makes sense of the English language. Rather than memorising lists of words by sight (which is effectively reducing the alphabetic language of English to a pictorial language), students are taught how to break a word into its component parts and analyse them. This analysis helps them to discover either what sounds the letters make (reading), or what letters they can use to represent those sounds on paper (spelling) — all before they have finished their first year of school!

Educators all across the planet are recognising (again) that phonics is the only method of teaching English that is consistent with the brain's pattern of learning. LEM Phonics is Australia's own 'home grown' synthetic phonics program, created in Australia, especially for the Australian accent, to suit Australian classrooms. I believe Australia can climb aboard this new wave of phonics instruction through LEM Phonics, making future generations of children Literate for Life.

Training and professional learning

LEM Phonics overview (one-day course)

The LEM Phonics overview is a one-day course which shows the foundational principles and teaching content of the LEM Phonics program. It is useful for schools who are considering installing the program, and it can also be used as a refresher course for schools currently using LEM Phonics. The one-day course contains no assessed content or examinations, and certificates are not supplied. The course provides 5 training hours across 12 modules and is conducted by an LEM Phonics registered instructor.

LEM Phonics introductory course (Level 1)

The LEM Phonics introductory course is a 3-day course which prepares teachers to instruct students in the LEM Phonics program. The course does not necessarily need to be held over consecutive days. Participants are assessed with an examination, and issued with an official certificate upon achieving a passing mark. Successful participants become eligible to apply for intermediate and in turn advanced level training. The course provides 20 training hours across 30 modules and is conducted by an LEM Phonics registered instructor.

LEM Phonics intermediate course (Level 2)

The LEM Phonics intermediate course is conducted by a registered instructor on a one-to-one basis through correspondence (usually email). The course contains 15 modules which include study material and appendices, plus questions on the study material to assess the application of the concepts. Each module is returned to the instructor for assessment, and upon completion of all modules the participant is assessed with a final examination. An official certificate is issued to participants who obtain a passing mark and they become eligible to apply for the Level 3 advanced course.

Advanced diploma in LEM Phonics (Level 3)

The Advanced diploma in LEM Phonics is available to participants who have successfully completed both Level 1 and Level 2 training. In addition, applicants must have been practically using LEM Phonics for a period of at least 2 years. The advanced course is 12 modules, covering all aspects of LEM Phonics instruction. The first 11 modules are done in a similar manner to the intermediate course (via email). The final module is a practical course presentation, where the participant will present an abbreviated version of the introductory course in front of a small class (and an examiner). Upon completion, successful participants are eligible to become registered instructors in LEM Phonics, conducting training and selling resources.

Detailed information on professional standards, Australian Curriculum alignment and training certification is available in the document LEM Phonics professional standards and training, available on our website at www.lemphonics.com/downloads.
